Edith SeVille Coale Medical Scholarship Awards – April 2015

Name	School	Summary of Achievements
Bridget Huysman	George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Services	Bridget holds a master's degree in public health and is a published researcher and instructor. She has worked as a bilingual surgical technologist in Latin America and currently volunteers at student-run health clinics for the underserved in D.C. and Maryland.
Lauren Croda	Georgetown University School of Medicine	Lauren is an experienced elementary and middle schoolteacher. Her goal is to enter the field of pediatric endocrinology. Currently, she serves as a mentor for children staying at a shelter on reading, writing and healthy habits through the Big Hoya Little Saxa at DC General.
Fatimah Fahimuddin	Howard University College of Medicine	Fatimah is dedicated to becoming a colorectal surgeon. She volunteers at the New Freedman's Clinic on the campus caring for uninsured individuals and is one of the select few chosen as a MedSTAR to tutor first year medical students in anatomy.
Katie Hsih	The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine	Katie has pursued a fellowship at Oxford in medical anthropology and spent more than a year working for a humanitarian organization in Sierra Leone. She is now leading a research project to improve attention and mental health among young mothers in inter-city Baltimore who are struggling to pass their GED exams.
